Introduction

This collection contains 41 cubic feet of the records of the Junior League of Brooklyn, located at 55 Pierrepont Street in Brooklyn Heights, New York. The Junior League of Brooklyn is an organization of women dedicated to voluntarism, social advocacy, and improving communities through the leadership and charitable action of trained members. The collection consists of a variety of organizational records including meeting minutes, membership files, annual reports, board manuals, documents pertaining to the Junior League of Brooklyn's relationship with the Court Appointed Special Advocates Program (CASA) of New York as well as the Association of Junior Leagues International, and printed material. In addition, a large volume of scrapbooks, photographs, committee and volunteer activity records illustrate the League's involvement in recognizing and dealing with social issues of inequity and economic hardship. The inclusive dates of the records of the Junior League of Brooklyn span from 1910 to 2002, with bulk dates ranging from 1930 to 1999. The materials were received and accessioned directly from the League through two transfers. Access to meeting minutes is restricted for a period of fifteen years from the date of creation. Access to the CASA case files is restricted because they contain personal information regarding specific children's cases.

Historical Note

The first Junior League took shape in New York City in 1901 due to the efforts of debutante Mary Harriman, who felt that new rights for women implied new responsibilities toward their communities. As a result, young women were encouraged to actively volunteer and to find useful outlets for their skills and interests. The success of the New York League led to the creation of the Boston Junior League in 1907, and by 1921, thirty Leagues had been established in six U.S. regions. The Leagues are at present incorporated into the Association of Junior Leagues International, with each League self-directing but bound by the Association's By-laws. The Association offers leadership training and experience to individual members and assistance to its member Leagues. The mission of the Association, binding on all local Leagues, states that "its purpose is exclusively educational and charitable."<sup>1</sup> The local leagues provide a means for women to strengthen and use their talents by participating in community projects, as well as encouraging them to work within individual leagues to administer the organization.

The Junior League of Brooklyn formed in 1910 as a response to social and health problems facing certain communities. Overcrowded tenements filled with struggling immigrants made up much of Brooklyn's neighborhood and communities, and a group of debutantes and young married women in Brooklyn recognized the need for assistance in areas in which local government aid fell short. They organized the Junior League of Brooklyn based on the already formed Leagues in Manhattan and Boston. The Junior League of Brooklyn, as the third oldest existing Junior League, maintained the slogan, "Everybody Doing Something for Somebody."<sup>2</sup> The JLB successfully lobbied the Board of Education in 1915 to provide free lunches for school children in Brooklyn. Other activities during the early 20th century included facilitating health services for victims of tuberculosis, launching a bookshop in Brooklyn Heights, and establishing the Junior League House, a residence for one hundred working girls.

Following the stock market crash of 1929, the Junior League of Brooklyn provided aid during the economic downturn by operating nutrition centers and milk stations for families. In 1930, members successfully raised $12,000 for the community by holding a Sanitary Fair and the Calico Ball. The League established the Central Volunteer Bureau in 1940 to assist in the World War II effort, and members participated in Red Cross training and the sale of war bonds. During wartime, the League also produced theatrical productions for children and repaired thousands of toys for donation. Fundraising efforts made possible the purchase of equipment for the Research Laboratory of the State University of New York's College of Medicine at King's County Hospital in the late 1940s.

The 1950s found the Junior League involved in Civilian Defense efforts through the organization of first aid courses and supported the American Red Cross.<sup>3</sup> The Toy Workshop was the major project of the decade, providing both donated and handmade toys to local hospitals and other societies supporting children. In general efforts revolved around children, focusing on day care, dental clinics, playgrounds, nursery schools, parenting, and education. One major project, begun in 1956, was the Kings County Hospital Recreational room. The League also promoted "The Price of Liberty", a radio series focusing on stories of American freedom, which was produced with the help of the Junior League of Albany.<sup>4</sup>

The Junior League of Brooklyn celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in 1960 by creating the Social Service Fellowship program, reflecting the social changes and movements of the decade. The Fellowship provided financial support to five graduate students, one per year, with the stipulation that they work in social services in Brooklyn for two years upon graduation. Additional projects during this time included a reading comprehension program, collaboration with the Brooklyn Museum and the Long Island Historical Society (renamed the Brooklyn Historical Society in 1987). Volunteer activities in the 1970s consisted of sponsoring a hot breakfast program for students in Fort Greene, the compilation of city guidebooks for the disabled, and producing a successful fundraising event called the "Underground Society Bash" at the newly-formed New York City Transit Museum, located in an unused downtown Brooklyn subway station.

In 1977, the League membership voted to create subject-oriented task forces as a means of focusing limited resources for greater effect. The task forces, made up of subgroups of members, concentrated on child welfare, urban issues, and cultural affairs. The implementation of the task force system proved to be a strong move on the part of the League in effectively providing aid to the community where needed. In 1979, the Junior League of Brooklyn initiated the Children in Placement (CIP) project in collaboration with New York's Council on Adoptable Children and the Council of New York Law Associates, in order to aid permanency planning for children without homes. This effort developed into and contributed to the strength of the current national Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) program. CASA provides trained advocates for abused, neglected or abandoned children in the foster care and court system.

During the 1970s, the growth in women working full time in the United States affected the Junior League of Brooklyn as members increasingly had less weekday availability. Seventy percent of the membership became employed full or part-time during this period.<sup>5</sup> The League responded to changing needs by removing a three hours per week placement requirement, providing placement opportunities for flexible schedules, and by setting meeting times on weeknights and weekends. The Junior League of Brooklyn also strove for the makeup of the membership to reflect the diversity of the group's borough. In 1980, the Association of Junior Leagues International established a Member Practices Network to facilitate the diversification of membership in member leagues. Delegates from individual leagues attended conferences, seminars, and training sessions in order to return to their local leagues prepared for implementation. A report of the Junior League of Brooklyn in 1981 showed that seventy-four percent of members lived in the neighborhoods of Brooklyn Heights, Cobble Hill, Park Slope, and adjoining neighborhoods. The League set a goal to "increase geographic representation in the League beyond the 'brownstone belt' slowly but surely."<sup>6</sup> After a decade of diversification work the League put out a position statement on multiculturalism in 1991 stating, "The JLB reaches out to all women who share our commitment to voluntarism, regardless of race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, or disability".<sup>7</sup> The League's first African-American president, Debra Smallwood, was elected to serve the 1992-1993 year.

In the 1990's the Junior League continued working on a variety of issues including child advocacy, homelessness, domestic abuse, rape, and youth violence<sup>8</sup>. In 1993 the League produced a video entitled "Restoring Dignity: Frontline Response to Rape", in cooperation with Long Island College Hospitals. The video was conceived as a tool for police officers, hospital officials, social workers and other first responders for "learning what it is that a rape survivor needs and requires to get on the road to recovery".<sup>9</sup> In 1996, the League participated in the Silent Witness National Initiative by sponsoring a 'day of witness' outside New York's Supreme Court building to memorialize and focus the attention of the courts on women who died as a result of domestic violence. The League also began a major project with the Brooklyn Child Advocacy Center to help establish a center of immediate and sensitive intervention for sexually abused children.

At the end of the 20th century the Junior League of Brooklyn implemented the council system of organization. The council system shrunk the size of the board and shifted its focus to broader issues and long-range strategic planning, while the committees were given more power to make administrative decisions on a day to day basis. The system also introduced a managerial layer, or Council, to help guide the committees and provide leadership when needed.

- VIII. Printed Materials, 1920-2000
- IX. Scrapbooks, 1925-1978
- X. Photographs, 1940-1994 [bulk: undated]
- XI. Artifacts, 1985-2000

Items range from poor to excellent condition, with most recent materials in better condition. The collection is closed with no plans to accession further materials from the Junior League of Brooklyn.

Series I, Administrative Records, 1910-2002, consists of administrative records created by the Junior League of Brooklyn. These materials include annual reports, the constitution and by-laws, position statements, goals and objectives, correspondence pertaining to administrative matters, officer and committee job descriptions, board and president's manuals, and general office administrative materials. Membership information is also included. Member files are arranged in alphabetical order by surname. They range in date from the 1930s to 2003. These files include members' admission applications, correspondence, resignation notices, transfer cards denoting members' moves to and from other leagues, and volunteer placement information. There is a flat box containing an oversized master membership list. This series also includes index cards with similar membership information in alphabetical order. Items in this series are in poor to excellent condition.

Series II, Meetings and Minutes, 1910-2001, holds records of the monthly meetings of the Junior League of Brooklyn's executive board, the group's general meetings held for all members, and annual meetings. The series includes minutes and related materials such as agendas, committee and task force reports, and other handouts. The meeting minutes detail which officers were present, who presided over the meeting, and when it was called to order and adjourned. Topics in the minutes cover all organizational matters such as development, project and volunteer placement, committee and task force updates, and membership status. Both board meeting minutes and general meeting minutes are arranged in chronological order beginning from the oldest records to the most recent. Certain annual, opening and closing meeting minutes are in separate folders based on original order, also arranged chronologically. Items in this series are in poor to very good condition.

Series III, Accounting and Financial, consists of the Junior League of Brooklyn's financial records. These materials include financial status and budget reports, ledgers, and documents generated by the Finance Committee and the Treasurer. The records span from 1941 to 2000. The items are in fair to excellent condition.

Series IV, Committees and Task Forces, 1939-2000, is composed of records of member committees and external advisors. These records include correspondence and meeting minutes of the Community Advisory Council, documents pertaining to the membership diversification efforts and task force implementation, membership admissions and training, project studies, and agencies. A large portion of records in this series also relate to the planning and execution of volunteer placement for the membership. Related materials can be found in Series II. Meetings and Minutes (based on date), and Series V. Subject Files (based on agency, event or activity). Materials related to the Council Implementation committee can be found in Series I. Administrative Records, "Council system - 1987,1998". Items in this series are in fair to excellent condition.

Series V, Subject Files, 1927-2002, holds records of anniversaries and other events, League projects and associated agencies, fundraising, public relations, research and other activities. The series is arranged alphabetically. Related materials are found in Series IV. Committees and Task Forces. Public relations materials contain some press photographs of League leadership and special events.

Series VI, Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA), 1974-1985, consists of records pertaining to the JLB's involvement in the Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) program which provided trained advocates for abused, neglected or abandoned children in the foster care and court system. Materials also pertain to the Children in Placement Project (CIP), the precursor to CASA, a program developed in the Family Court of New York City to monitor placements of children in foster care. Items include project proposals, case notes, correspondence, fundraising and other financial documents, reports and research materials, and publications. Some items in this series contain sensitive information regarding individual cases and confidential information about employees of the program. These records must be handled with discretion.

Series VII, Association of Junior Leagues International, Inc., is comprised of documents pertaining to the relationship of the Junior League of Brooklyn and the Association of Junior Leagues International, Inc. (AJLI). AJLI was formed in 1921 and provides continuity, support, guidance, and leadership development opportunities to 293 Junior Leagues in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the United Kingdom. Items include conference materials, annual questionnaires, board minutes and reports, administrative documents, correspondence, mailings, input packets, programs and workshops, strategic planning and public relations materials.

Series VIII, Printed Materials, 1930-1992, encompasses published documents created by the Junior League of Brooklyn, the Association of Junior Leagues, and media sources. The series includes bulletins, the Brooklyn Junior League News, newsletters, and brochures produced by the Junior League of Brooklyn. There are also several issues of Junior League Magazine and Junior League Review from the Association of Junior Leagues. Newspaper clippings date from 1920 to 1992. Items in Series VI are in poor to good condition, and clippings were photocopied onto acid-free paper. The series contains one flat box housing oversized brittle newspaper clippings.

Series IX, Scrapbooks, 1925-1978, consists of unbound scrapbook leaves in folders and oversized scrapbooks with original covers. Oversized items are housed in two flat boxes. Materials found in the scrapbooks include press clippings that were either glued or taped onto leaves, photographs, handwritten annotations, correspondence, event invitations, and fliers.

Series X, Photographs, 1940-1994, contains photographic materials created by or for the Junior League of Brooklyn. The bulk of this series is unprocessed and consists of unsorted photographs and negatives of unidentified persons and events. A small portion of the photographs have been enlarged and mounted onto foam board; these have been placed into oversized flat boxes. Photographs that are identifiable and dated have been labeled with such information on folders. The series also holds a small number of slides. Items in this series are in poor to excellent condition. Additional slides in "Decorator's show house", series 5. Additional photographs can be found in "Public relations" in series 5.

Series XI, Artifacts, 1985-2000, is comprised of audio visual material, small objects, plaques and awards found in the records of the Junior League of Brooklyn. The objects include pins from the League's 75th anniversary and general "JLB" pins. Such items in this series are in excellent condition. Other artifacts include two diskettes, one of which is readable. Additional audio cassettes can be found in Series V. Subject Files "Radio Prime Time: Audio Cassette Tapes, 1985". The diskettes may be considered for discard due to the obsolete nature of its technology. The materials are not accessible in their current format, however, a digital transfer may be made at the researcher's expense.

Processing Note

Approximately half of the materials accessioned were already divided into meeting minutes, photographs, scrapbooks, committee and agency records. The remainder of the materials was found in disorder and integrated into the more ordered half of the materials after processing. In total, there are 41 cubic feet of processed records, housed in 30 records cartons and eleven flat boxes. There is one records box, two oversize boxes and one index box of photographs unprocessed.
